

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Who is Nadrasca?

Nadrasca is a disability support organisation in the Eastern suburbs of Melbourne supporting more than 300 people to achieve their personal and professional goals through a diverse range of supports and services including accommodation (Supported Independent Living and Outreach), day programs and activities, School Leaver Employment Supports (SLES), supported employment and support coordination.

Who is Brite?

Brite is a social enterprise providing training and employment to people with disability. Brite employs over 150 people with disability across Broadmeadows. In addition, Brite offers a wide range of support services in developing employee capabilities through education pathways, independent living programs and access to improved social and economic opportunities in the community.

Why are they considering merging?

Nadrasca and Brite share common ground in supported employment, and saw opportunities to not only expand community access, individualised support, support coordination and supported independent living, but also access to additional training opportunities.

The merger's potential is strengthened by the alignment of both organizations' values and their shared vision for positive outcomes for people supported.

How long have they been considering merging?

Nadrasca and Brite have known of each other and regarded one another highly for many years and have been discussing the possibility of a merged entity for the past six months.

What are the estimated timeframes? When will we know if the merger is going ahead?

A joint oversight committee with equal representation from both organisations will be established in the coming weeks to discuss what a merged entity could look like.

We will keep you informed along the way, with a final decision regarding the merger's advancement expected to be made before the end of June.

Is anything changing yet?

Both organisations will continue to operate as normal under their current names and structures.

How do I stay informed?

We will be providing updates to our stakeholders via email as well the wearebettertogether.au webpage, and in April we will run a series of in-person and online information sessions to give you the opportunity to ask questions and meet members of the joint oversight committee.
